This could be your kid. The subject of this article occurred in the UK. however, some states are making vaccines mandatory!

Young girl left unable to talk or walk, sleeps 23 hours a day after getting Cervarix vaccine for HPV (NaturalNews) Much of the attention concerning the dangers of getting vaccinated for human papillomavirus (HPV) and cervical cancer has been focused on Merck & Co.'s Gardasil. But a recent report in the UK's Daily Mail explains that GlaxoSmithKline's (GSK) Cervarix, a competing HPV vaccine, recently left an otherwise healthy girl in a "waking coma" where she is now unable to talk or walk, and sleeps 23 hours a day because of a complete lack of energy.

Lucy Hinks' parents, Steve and Pauline, say their 13-year-old daughter used to be a straight-A student with an excellent school attendance record, and a penchant and adeptness for math. Everything changed, however, after Lucy received her third installment of the HPV vaccine Cervarix back in May, which has left her in a near-vegetative state and in need of 24-hour care and monitoring.

Beginning in September 2008, the UK Department of Health began a national vaccination program that included vaccinating young girls against HPV with Cervarix. All young girls in school are subjected to the shot unless their parents take the time to deliberately opt out of it -- but just like in the US, most parents are pressured into accepting it for their daughters based on empty reassurances about its alleged safety.

"I was concerned about the potential side effects because Lucy had a severe reaction from the MMR vaccine. But I was reassured by the school nurse that side effects were extremely unlikely," said Lucy's mother Pauline to the Daily Mail. "We feel betrayed because, like most parents, we trust the health authorities with our children's lives."

Pauline and her husband Steve now have to provide continuous bedside care for their daughter, who can no longer take care of herself. Initially, Lucy was able to at least limp her way to the bathroom, but now her parents say that she can only lie in bed. The Hinks have even had to install a mechanical lift connecting the second story of their home with the first so that Lucy can at least come downstairs and spend some time with her family every once in a while.

According to available data, nearly 4,500 of the four million HPV vaccinations that have been administered since the vaccination program began have caused known negative side effects -- and these are just the reported cases. Among the more severe have been cases of Guillain-Barre Syndrome, as well as Lucy's now confirmed diagnosis of myalgic encephalomyelitis (ME) / chronic fatigue syndrome (CFS).

Here in the states, Merck & Co. have produced a sister drug known as Gardasil. There have been many terrible side effects as result of the series of injections. Dr. Caprile has personally treated one seventeen-year-old young lady who was an athlete and dancer that received Gardasil. Within days she developed a seizure disorder and chronic fatigue where she could not attend school. She was unable to drive due to "blackouts". We treated her here in the office with Nutrition Response Testing with great results. Her energy returned, and she was able to return to school at her activities. Merck has never taken any responsibility for this kid's suffering. She subsequently developed a cardiac arrhythmia which required heart surgery. Nice Huh?

Recently, these sneaky drug companies had a physician on the Today Show. Their new approach is to also vaccinate young boys as they may be a "carrier" for HPV. They are also presenting this dangerous drug as a "cancer prevention drug". Of course, now parents will run to their pediatrician's office to get the drug without knowing the very dangerous side effects. Be informed, Be very informed.
